Northwestern Oklahoma State University

FOUNDATION

ANNUAL REPORT

2009

Dear Foundation Members:

Northwestern Oklahoma State University has made significant progress in numerous areas during the past year. The University experienced growth in enrollment for the second straight year, completed several major construction projects that will serve our students for years to come, received approval to begin a new program in agriculture education, and received national accreditation for our social work program. I am proud of the work of many dedicated faculty and staff members who took advantage of opportunities to enhance the mission of Northwestern.

Several initiatives related to academic programs and campus improvements were completed last year because of the support of alumni and supporters working through the Northwestern Foundation. New construction projects associated with the Vision for Victory Campaign, the agriculture education program and the highly-competitive President's Leadership Class are possible only through the support of private gifts. In short, our success is directly tied to your willingness to give of your time and resources. I offer my deep appreciation to each of you who chose to invest in Northwestern during the past year.

Your support is even more significant given the challenging economic climate of our nation. A lagging economy creates a vicious cycle as private giving generally declines, yet the needs of Northwestern and its students increase. For the first time in the University's history, state funding makes up less than 50 percent of our total budget. As state support for public higher education declines, Northwestern will become more dependent upon private sources of revenue to accomplish our mission of providing educational opportunities and services.

We are doing our part to conserve resources and keep tuition affordable. Northwestern will not raise tuition and fees for the 2009-10 academic year in an effort to help our students and their families weather these tough economic times. We have asked our faculty and staff to do without salary increases for the third consecutive year and we will make cuts in non-academic operational and travel budgets. We have and will continue to be excellent stewards of our resources.

Your support of Northwestern has never been more valuable. If I can leave you with a single thought, it would be simply this – your support makes a difference. You can see it in the eyes of students and their families upon learning they will receive a scholarship that was established by someone like you. Your support of Northwestern will make the difference in our ability to recruit new students and help them reach their ultimate goal of earning a college degree.

I thank you for all that you do in the name of Northwestern. With your continued support, we will make the future brighter for those that choose to become Rangers.

Sincerely,

Janet Cunningham, Ed.D.
President

Western artist Harold Holden of Kremlin, who has a gallery in Enid, has been commissioned to create "The Ranger". Each of the three campuses will have one of these beautiful works of art placed in prominent and aesthetically pleasing locations. Each life and quarter size monument, when finished, will stand approximately 10 feet high and be placed on a four foot base. In honor of Northwestern's 110 years of service, 110 bronze maquettes, which measure 12 inches tall, will be cast and sold as numbered limited editions. The Foundation and Alumni Association will use the proceeds for the benefit of the university. Cost for each of the maquettes will be $2,500 and approximately $1,500 will be tax deductible. $1,000 will be due at the order date with the remainder due at delivery.

Dear Friends, Alumni, and Colleagues:

Last year at this time we were experiencing unprecedented growth and increase in the Foundation's assets. At the 2008 annual meeting I commented that, "the hits just keep on coming." Since then, we have seen a stock market crash and a waning oil and gas industry in northwest Oklahoma. Although I can't sugarcoat those events, the Foundation has pushed forward and exciting things have continued to happen.

In the last year, we issued a Strategic Plan for 2008-2013. This is an ambitious plan with a mission of "bonding donor's passions with Northwestern's success." Our vision is this, that the Northwestern Foundation be "committed to becoming the premier regional university foundation in Oklahoma, providing Northwestern Oklahoma State University the resources required to thrive in a competitive collegiate environment." Our mission and vision are taking shape and the University is more than competitive.

The Foundation and University's success can be seen in many areas. The new construction at the campus will spark pride in any Northwestern graduate. The campus view from Oklahoma Boulevard is simply gorgeous. Renovations are complete on the Health and Sports Science and Science buildings and were dedicated on April 24th. The new facilities at the football and baseball fields are taking shape and the progress continues to generate donations through the Vision for Victory campaign. Once completed, it will position Northwestern as an elite member of the NAIA. Our work is never done, of course, and we remain highly ambitious to pursue our growth strategy for still greater success ahead.

May 7th marked the 50th anniversary of the incorporation of the Northwestern Foundation. Despite 50 years, no other university foundation is more ready than Northwestern's to deliver results for students, faculty and the university. The Foundation has created a recognition wall in Herod Hall on the west wall of the north entrance to recognize Foundation donors. The wall will be decorated with bronze plaques of those donors with their history and information. The Foundation is proud to recognize the generosity of its donors. While each is unique, all are equally important in achieving the common goal of supporting quality education at Northwestern.

It has been a great pleasure to serve this last year as chairman. I have experienced more pride and joy giving back to Northwestern in this way than I thought possible. I hope to continue to serve the Northwestern Foundation and give back to the university that gave so much to me. I hope you can do the same.

Sincerely,

Chairman

Dear Friends:

Thank you for being a part of our Northwestern family and ensuring our University and students will be successful with your generous investing. This year the Foundation is pleased to be able to celebrate over 50 years of supporting students and the University through private gifts. Since May 7, 1959, when the Foundation was incorporated, generous people like you have been investing in northwest Oklahoma by assisting students attain a top quality collegiate education.

Although we don't have full records of Foundation scholarship recipients back to 1959. It is exciting to consider the number of students that the Northwestern Foundation has supported over the last five decades. We have taken a sampling of our scholarship recipients to include in this year's annual report. We have chosen 6 former recipients to let you know how and what they are doing with the private support you have provided. These are just a sampling of the high quality investments the Foundation has made in education since its incorporation.

As you would assume, this has been a financially challenging year for the Foundation. The large downturn of the global market has a direct effect on the Foundation's ability to invest and raise additional funds. Instead of having an incredible year like last year, we are having a very average year for fund-raising. As with every other educational foundation in the country, we have made some hard decisions about scholarships and budgets but I believe they were the right ones. When I look around at other organizations, I continue to feel grateful that I am able to serve at Northwestern.

Thankfully, expert sources are now reporting that we may have hit the bottom of the recession and a recovery is ahead of us. As we get ready to send this report to print we have already started to see a good recovery in the value of our assets and I believe we are positioned to do very well over the next 18-24 months. If history repeats itself, as in other major downturns in the market, we could be looking at very robust returns in the near future.

Please feel free to ask questions as you look over our report. It is an honor for me to serve the Foundation during an amazing time of growth and renovation. I want to thank you personally for allowing me to perform in my current capacity and for giving of yourself so that others may benefit from your generosity.

Kris Johnson

Coming from the big city to a small, rural university is culture shock for a lot of Northwestern's students, but most come to love and appreciate what the community and school have to offer them. This includes Kansas City, Missouri, native Kris Johnson.

Kris came to Northwestern in 2005 knowing he wanted to major in mass communications. Through the years he developed his video editing skills at NWTv7, and has used his graphic design skills on a number of posters and publications. Some of these publications include the covers for various sports media guides through his work in the Sports Information office. He also helps with updates on the athletics web site.

Kris also has been demonstrating his leadership skills by serving as last year's Student Government President.

Kris was a member of the Ranger men's basketball team for four years. During that time, he was a member of two Ranger teams that played in the NAIA National Basketball Tournament – basically in his backyard of Kansas City. He played in both the 2007 Elite Eight appearance and last year's return to the tournament.

Kris said that being a part of basketball has helped him to pay for his education, but it also has helped him to meet teammates that he'll stay in touch with for the rest of his life. Being a part of the team has allowed him to travel, but more importantly, to grow as a person.

The NAIA's Champions of Character program teaches five core values – Respect, Responsibility, Integrity, Servant Leadership and Sportsmanship. Kris embodies all these values. In fact, Kris was named as Northwestern's recipient of the Champions of Character award during last year's national tournament.

Ranger men's head coach Andrew Brown said "Kris is a natural leader and has an infectious personality. He represents what I believe a Ranger is all about."

Former men's basketball head coach and current athletic director Bob Battisti coached Kris during his first two years at Northwestern, and had this to say about him:

"Kris Johnson is a student and athlete who got involved. He attacked and embraced the whole college experience. Kris will look back on his days at Northwestern as an exciting time, not just four years of playing basketball."

Kris graduated from Northwestern last spring, but fortunately it won't be the last that we see of him. He returned to Northwestern this fall to begin his master's degree and serve as a graduate assistant coach for the men's basketball team.

That small school Ranger pride definitely seems to have rubbed off on him.

Jena Seiler

For many high school seniors, going to college and getting a degree is the next step in life. It is their first time on their own and a chance to experience the world from a different point of view. A new place, new friends, new school and for some, having to pay for it themselves. This was the case for Conway Springs, Kansas native, Jena Seiler.

"I knew, coming from a big family, that in high school I was going to have to keep my grades up and do well in sports and activities to get scholarships," Seiler said.

Seiler is the second youngest of 11 children. She watched all her older siblings go to college and come back with quite a bit of debt. So, Seiler made it a point to be very involved in high school and take any and every opportunity to keep herself with minimal debt after college.

As she began her college search she knew she wanted to go somewhere else other than the big name schools of her peers. While she looked for the college for her, Northwestern found the student they wanted and pursued her offering her the scholarships she desperately needed.

"My parents told me they would support me but they couldn't help financially," Seiler said. "Northwestern was very upfront with what they could give and their willingness to help me throughout my time there was a big, big deal."

Seiler was accepted into the President's Leadership Class and received scholarship all four years in Alva. She said that from day one the campus felt more like home than any other campus she had visited and everybody was very personable and easy going. While at Northwestern, Seiler formed the Catholic Newman Society and was very active in many other clubs but it was the help she received as she neared graduation that really stuck with her.

Northwestern does not offer a double major and she was only a semester shy of getting her Spanish degree. The problem was she had to graduate in December with her Psychology degree and lost her grant money. Seiler was going to have to leave because she was in no position to pay for school herself.

"I went to the Foundation and Skeeter identified a couple of scholarships that I was eligible for," Seiler said. "I got them both and was able to get my Spanish degree."

Seiler graduated with the least amount of debt of any of her brothers and sisters and accepted a teaching position at her former high school as the new Spanish teacher.

"Northwestern taught me more about myself than I ever thought possible," Seiler said about the people at Northwestern. "They took a shy girl and challenged me to step out of my comfort zone and helped me build confidence in myself."

"I feel like I have amazing prospects now. I have a big platform in front of me and Northwestern paved the way educationally, financially, and professionally."

Small Town Values

Cassie Walden

Cassie (McEachern) Walden is a 2004 graduate of Northwestern Oklahoma State University. Growing up in Jet, Oklahoma Cassie knew that she was going to go to college, it was just a matter of where. She graduated with 34 students in her senior class from Timberlake High School and was invited to compete in the Miss Cinderella Pageant on Northwestern's campus as the reigning Miss Timberlake. She went on to win Miss Cinderella and the scholarships that came with participating in the pageant.

"Scholarships were THE reason I went to Northwestern," Walden said. "It would have been stupid to turn down the Cinderella scholarship because it paid for everything. It would have been crazy to pass up an offer like that."

Because of her success in the Miss Cinderella Pageant, Walden applied to one place, Northwestern. She felt at home and comfortable in Alva and on campus.

"I felt like the university was going to give me as many opportunities to do things as I wanted to do," Walden said. "Northwestern really fit me."

Walden went on to major in business administration and was very active on campus. She was a part of the Delta Zeta Sorority, Student Government Association, and Phi Beta Lambda Business Club. Walden feels like Northwestern prepared her for life in the real world.

"I feel like Northwestern helped me balance my life through my activities and relationships," Walden said. "It prepared me by giving me the skills needed to succeed in the real world through managing my day-to-day tasks, my classes, and my activities. The values I grew up with in Jet are the same as the values expressed on Northwestern's campus."

Northwestern was a good transition for Walden from a small town high school to college to her job for a major corporation. After graduation, Walden moved to Oklahoma City to work for a medical clinic and then moved to Tulsa. She now works for AHC, Inc., a Health Care Receivables Management Company based out of Gainesville, Virginia, as the manager of business development. Her position can be equated to a director of sales. She travels all over the United States working with hospitals that contract with AHC, Inc.

In 2007, she married Tyler Walden, also a graduate of Northwestern. He played four years at Northwestern for the Ranger men's basketball team. Cassie and Tyler live in Oklahoma City and try to get back to Alva as much as they can.

"My experience at Northwestern was really great, really, really great," Walden said about her college experience. "I was active and felt like the college embraced me as much as I enjoyed being on campus. I think you can get a little or a lot out of your experiences and I feel like I got a lot out of it and hope that I am able to give a lot back to Northwestern."

A Ranger Way of Life

Megan Darrow

Growing up in Burlington, Oklahoma, just a hop, skip and a jump from Alva, Megan (Dippel) Darrow knew that she wanted to go to Northwestern Oklahoma State University. To Darrow and her friends and family, Alva was the “big” town and her mother, Sue Diel, worked for the university. She never thought twice about going anywhere else, Northwestern was where she wanted to be.

“I chose Northwestern because I had scholarships there and my mom was a professor at the university,” Darrow said, “so I knew it was a great school and I could get a great education.”

When she got to campus she was not really sure what she wanted to do for the rest of her life so she tested the waters a little bit. She found out that she had a passion for medicine but she was not too confident in herself. Enter Dr. Cynthia Pfeifer-Hill.

“Dr. Pfeifer-Hill took me under her wing and helped me get through the pre-med program,” Darrow said. “Northwestern allows you to learn under an umbrella of different programs so you come out of college a well-rounded student able to go into any field and feel confident that you can do it.”

Darrow graduated from Northwestern in 2002 and went on to graduate from dental school in 2005. She is a dentist in Enid where she and her husband Dudley, a Northwestern graduate and member of the 1999 NAIA National Championship Ranger football team, is a football coach at Enid High School. They have a son, Dallas, born in 2007.

Looking back at her time at Northwestern, Darrow was thankful for faculty like Dr. Pfeifer-Hill who allowed her to pursue her passions and lead her in the right directions. She knew, no matter what, she would attend college but if it were not for the assistance she said it would have been tough.

“Scholarships are huge at Northwestern, HUGE!” Darrow said. “It is important for alumni to get involved and provide those scholarships.”

Being a Ranger alumnus herself, Darrow has offered to help provide some of the equipment needed in the newly renovated Science Building at Northwestern. She and Dudley also donated the funds for the 1999 Championship sign that can be seen at the entrance of Ranger Field.

“I think that those of us who had such wonderful experiences there owe it to give other people that experience,” Darrow said. “I was lucky enough to have someone take a chance on not knowing who I was and give a couple of extra dollars they could do without. I got a great education for that.”

Her decision to come to Northwestern is one that Darrow never doubts. She had a wonderful experience at Northwestern and wouldn’t change a thing about it.

“Northwestern has been a part of my life for as long as I can remember,” Darrow said. “My life started at Northwestern and I would not trade my years there for anything. It is hard to imagine where my life would be if Northwestern was out of the equation.”

A Family Tradition

Allen and Betsy Zadorozny

Scholarships to attend college have been around for some time but they have not always been in academics. Formerly, in order to get financial assistance one had to be involved in some form of athletics. In the sixties, Northwestern Oklahoma State University was growing a reputation for a quality education at a more than quality price. Betsy (Johnson) Zadorozny and Allen Zadorozny, two kids from Kansas, would go to there to check it out.

Allen was recruited by the new head coach of Northwestern football, Bill Schnebel, to come and be a back up quarterback for the Rangers. After finishing up at Coffeyville Community College, he took the trip to Alva to continue his education.

"I chose Northwestern because Schnebel offered me a full football scholarship," Allen said. "He kept up his end of the bargain and I became a backup for the Ranger football team."

Betsy came to Alva without knowing a single soul but she sure did like to swim and Dr. Yvonne Carmichael's Aquarinas was a big plus in her book. That wasn't the only thing that got Betsy to Northwestern though.

"I lived in Greensburg, Kansas, which was only about 100 miles from Alva," Betsy said. "The cost to go to school at Northwestern was very reasonable compared to a lot of the other schools I looked at."

Allen and Betsy met on campus and after less than a year of dating were married. Both would graduate from Northwestern. Allen, in 1967, majored in accounting and minored in economics and Betsy a year later, majored in elementary education and physical education.

"I had an excellent experience at Northwestern," Allen said. "I enjoyed the students and the instructors and the whole atmosphere fit my interests really well."

"I always had really good teachers," Betsy said. "I think Northwestern is one of the best schools for teacher education. I felt very well prepared after I graduated."

Betsy would go on to teach science in Oklahoma and Kansas and come away with some pretty prestigious awards along the way. She won the Christa McAuliffe Award and the Presidential Award for Excellence in Science and Math Teaching and in 1991 she was honored as one of Northwestern's Outstanding Graduates.

"I was overwhelmed because of all the neat people that came before me," Betsy said.

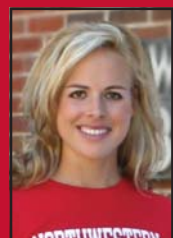

Allen has spent the last 30 years working in the electric cooperative business and he and Betsy have been devout givers to Northwestern through the Millennium Club.

They weren't the only two in their family to attend Northwestern. Betsy's mother Nell attended Northwestern and when her father passed away, he wanted money to be given to create a scholarship to aide Northwestern's students. The O.R. Johnson scholarship is still given today. Allen and Betsy also had two of their children attend and graduate from Northwestern.

"We are ready to recommend Northwestern to anybody we meet," Allen said. "Here it is 40 years later and Northwestern still has the vision and right people administering the university to create opportunities that might not be accessible at a larger school."

*Our Promise to Students
for the 21st Century*

Northwestern Oklahoma
State University Foundation, Inc.

Always a new beginning.

Over the past 110 years, Northwestern has taken great strides in building one of the top universities in Oklahoma and the nation. There is still great potential in northwest Oklahoma, and we must make it a realization.

Every year is a new beginning.

CLIMBING HIGHER

In a recent publication of U.S. News and World Report, Northwestern was the top-ranked baccalaureate college in the western United States in terms of least debt load of graduating students. This put Northwestern in the top 30 of all baccalaureate colleges in the west.

Total enrollment is up more than two percent this year compared to 2006. This year's incoming freshman class is the highest it has been since 2000. This is a forty percent increase from the previous year's freshman class. With your assistance we will continue on this positive climb.

Your support has elevated Northwestern to this status. Your continued support will propel Northwestern to the next level.

STUDENTS MAKE THE DIFFERENCE

Retaining quality students is a major priority. Last year, thirty-nine percent of Northwestern's students were awarded scholarships. A short-range goal for the Millennium Club is to see that more than fifty percent of Northwestern's students receive some form of scholarship. Keeping the students on campus is crucial to Northwestern's positive impact on the future.

As our enrollment continues to grow, it will require additional scholarship dollars to maintain a larger student body. We need everyone's help to make this goal a reality.

GIFT SIZE DOESN'T MATTER

Every gift makes a difference. The value is not in the monetary worth of the gift but the potential that can be unleashed from your gift.

THE MILLENNIUM CLUB

In order to ensure that future generations have the opportunity to share in the Northwestern experience, the Northwestern Foundation has established the Millennium Club, a giving program dedicated to building an additional $25 million scholarship endowment over the next decade. When fully funded, the Millennium Club will provide approximately $1.25 million annually to deserving students, with a focus on providing financial support to continuing students.

The Millennium Club is your opportunity to share Northwestern with future generations.

From the Football Field to the Pharmacy

Doug Sisemore

Many high school athletes have aspirations of going on to college and continuing their careers on the field, the court, or the pitch. Dreams do not always come true, however, and some of those athletes are left wondering how to pay for their continuing education. In 1968, Doug Sisemore was one of the lucky ones. He got to attend college and continue to play a sport he loved. Northwestern took a chance on Sisemore and he is thankful for his time on campus and on the playing field.

Sisemore grew up in Midwest City, Oklahoma and attended Carl Albert High School. He played football for the Carl Albert Titans and credits getting to Northwestern to Phil Prigmore.

"Phil's daughter went to Carl Albert and he is a pretty enthusiastic sports guy," Sisemore said. "Well, I had a pretty good year my senior year and he influenced the coaches at Northwestern to let me play."

Sisemore ended up with a half scholarship his freshman year at Northwestern and by the second half of the '68 football season he was the starting safety for the Rangers and would be for the next three years. Sisemore was put on full scholarship to play football and graduated in four years with a degree in biology. He is grateful that he got the opportunity to play for the Rangers.

After he graduated from Northwestern in 1972, Sisemore worked for about a year and then decided he wanted to get into pharmacy. He got his degree in pharmacy in 1977 and has been a pharmacist ever since.

Thinking back to his time at Northwestern, Doug remembers coaches and teammates he had and how times were changing at Northwestern. He recalls playing football on Newby Field, which today is the grass lot just west of the J.R. Holder Wellness Center, and opening the "new" stadium, Ranger Field still sits in the bowl southwest of the Alva campus. He remembers playing for Northwestern greats like Art Parkhurst, Walter Johnson, Cecil Perkins, and Bill Schnebel. Sisemore was a teammate of Mike Hargrove and good friends with Herschel Mosier, who are both in the Northwestern Sports Hall of Fame.

"I treasured my time at Northwestern and made a lot of really good friends," Sisemore said.

Sisemore has spent the last 20 years as the owner of a Reliable Discount Pharmacy in Oklahoma City. He realizes that Northwestern was a big part of his life and has enjoyed getting back together with old teammates and friends at alumni events. He made it to the Northwestern vs. Southwestern game in Weatherford a couple of years ago and really enjoyed himself.

"It is always nice to catch up with people you haven't seen in long time," Sisemore said.

Recently, Sisemore gave money to sponsor a locker in the newly renovated locker room at Ranger Field during the Vision for Victory campaign and he is a member of the Millennium Club. Giving back is important to Sisemore and he looks forward to setting foot back on campus, the place where it all started.

Northwestern Oklahoma State University Millennium Club

Northwestern is proud to recognize those supporters of the Millennium Club who have contributed to this new and ambitious fundraising endeavor. Our goal is to provide funds required to retain students who make a choice to attend any of Northwestern's campuses. Below, you will find the contributors to the three levels of giving for this program. Any person who has a desire to give can participate at some level.
